DESCRIBE THE PRESENT AND ORIGINAL (IF KNOWN) PHYSICAL APPEARANCE

Built sometime around the turn of the 20th century, the basic features of this house are similar to several others on Locust St. Symmetrical in design, the main features of this general type are a gable roof, center gable, and perch across the front. This particular house has a slightly projecting center pavilion and a mitered arch in the gable. The perch, supported by rectangular columns, has a gabled pediment in front of the door. The house is fairly simple but well kept up.

STATEMENT OF SIGNIFICANCE

Although this house is not highly significant in itself, it is part of a group of houses on Locust St. of similar design all built around the turn of the 20th century, which reflect a period of rapid growth in Cambridge. This growth was largely a result of the prosperity of the seafood industry and improvements in transportation which made the Eastern Shore less isolated. Although some of the houses on Locust Street are now run down, this well kept up home reveals that these are potentially attractive older homes.
